

A close-up photograph of a bumblebee on a large yellow flower. The bee is positioned in the lower-left quadrant of the frame, facing towards the right. Its body is dark with prominent white and yellow fuzzy patches. The flower's petals are bright yellow with some reddish-orange variegation. The background is a soft, out-of-focus yellow.

Haughton in Bloom in June

Part 2

Marigold and bee

Newport Road cosmos

White clover in Bradley Lane

A hot day in Back Lane - and a second flowering for this dandelion

These beautiful plants brighten up the corner of Newport Road and Jolt Lane.

The same display also includes these 'Growing for Gold' marigolds.

This is just one of the Bell Inn's splendid baskets.

Hazel nuts are already forming in Watery Lane.

A rather ragged speckled wood butterfly basks in Watery Lane.

One of the teasels catching the sunlight in Watery Lane

Meadow vetchling in Watery Lane

Bindweed

The first Dale Lane spear thistle

Insects are very fond of the wild roses.

Pretty but prickly - this thistle is in Dale Lane

A tall and delicate nipplewort graces Dale Lane.

This thrush is singing from the top of a Newport Road lamp-post.

This yellow loosestrife is in the churchyard ecology area.

Bee-friendly golden blooms in Newport Road beds.

Marguerites in Prince Avenue.

This ground elder is flowering in Watery Lane.

Tufted vetch climbing through the hawthorn hedge in Watery Lane.

The Bradley Lane bramble attracts many bees.

Self-heal in Bradley Lane

A perfect specimen of speckled wood in Bradley Lane.

The spear thistle attracts a bee in Dale Lane.

These pink bramble flowers are high in the hedge in Dale Lane.

Orange-shaded sycamore keys in Back Lane.

These bees have made a nest in a cow's hoof hole in Grassy Lane.